Problematic Sexual Behavior Program at DCAC

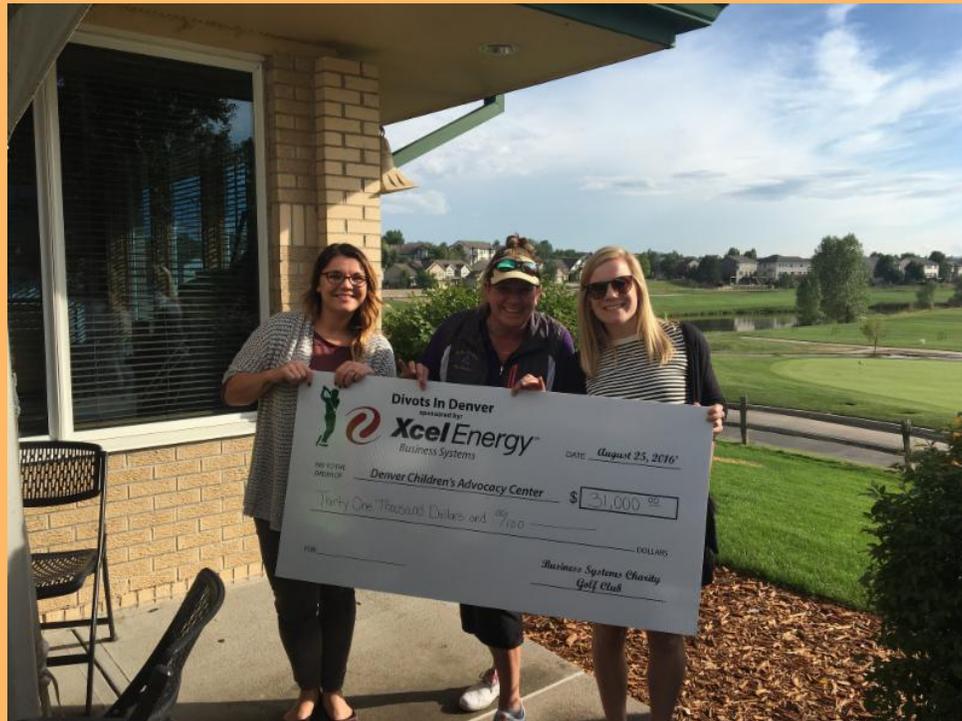

We are happy to announce that we are working with the University of Oklahoma to establish a treatment program for children with problematic sexual abuse behaviors and their families. This program is designed to eliminate problematic sexual behaviors and improve pro-social behaviors and adjustments in children. It is also designed to reduce stress and enhance skills in parents and other caregivers.

For more information about treatment for problematic sexual behavior in youth, please contact:

DCAC Receives Donation from Xcel Energy Golf Tournament

DCAC was recently nominated as one of the beneficiaries of the Divots in Denver Golf Tournament hosted by Xcel Energy. Kathy Rogers, an executive assistant with the IBM Team at Xcel Energy, nominated DCAC after learning about us through our website. Employees of Xcel Energy were then able to vote for various nonprofits to become beneficiaries. DCAC was fortunate enough to become a finalist and as a result, we received a donation for over $31,500. Thank you again to Xcel Energy, Kathy Rogers, and all of the tournament sponsors and attendees!

DCAC Holiday Decorating

With the holiday season right around the corner, we are starting to plan our holiday decorating! Every year, we love to make sure DCAC is properly prepared for the holidays with festive decorations inside and out. With three large houses, we often times need some help. We are looking for a corporate team to help us decorate our gingerbread houses!

If you are interested in helping or have any questions about how you or your company can help DCAC, please contact Meghan at MParman@DenverCAC.org or 303-825-3850.

Meet Forensic Interviewer, Hollie Reinhart

Hollie joined DCAC in 2016 with 8 years of experience working with children and families. She began her career working in community mental health, working closely with children who had experienced ongoing trauma. After graduating from Wichita State University with a bachelor's degree in psychology, Hollie began her master's degree in Human Development and Social Intervention from New York University, completing the program in 2014. During an internship opportunity while studying at NYU, she worked closely with a Child Advocacy Center and started her training as a Forensic Interviewer. Hollie began forensic interviewing in 2015 and is dedicated to the continued research and application of best practice of forensic interviewing.

Q: What do you find most rewarding?

A: Sometimes kids tell me "I can't tell you because I'm scared," and then they tell me anyway because they find the courage, and by the time they leave the CAC they have a group of professionals on their side. I tell kids at the end of each interview "Thank you for talking to me today," and sometimes they stop me and say, "No, thank you." When a child takes the time to thank me, I feel the gratitude and appreciation right there in that moment that I have provided them with a service that has helped them in so many ways.

Q: What do you find most challenging?

A: Interviewing requires me to adapt quickly, read and respond to emotional output, remember a hundred things a child has said, make sense of those things, and then come up with a new question all while still engaging with the child seated across the table. While most days this comes easy, there are days that it is harder to balance all those components of an interview.

Q: If you had a superpower, what would it be and why?

A: To be able to create as many hours in a day that I want/need. I am currently planning a wedding and some days just feel too short to get my to-do list done. I could also stretch out those vacation days.

Q: What do you love to do when you are not working?

A: I have two dogs that I love to spend time with and just be outside with. With being new to Denver and Colorado, I try to spend a lot of time exploring and trying new things. I am also always open to new recommendations for good coffee shops!
